

H-1B immigrants are immigrants who hold at least bachelors degrees.

To hire an H-1B immigrant, an American employer must first show that no qualified American is willing to take the offered job.

In addition to working for existing employers, many H-1B immigrants found companies in the U.S.

Engineering And Tech Firms For Which At Least 1 Founder Was Foreign-Born

Source: America's New Immigrant Entrepreneurs, UC Berkeley and Duke University, 2007.

Five examples of H-1B immigrant entrepreneurs and the number of jobs they created (as of 2008)

Company	Founder	Country of Origin	Employees
Intel	Andy Grove	Hungary	86,300
Sun	Bechtolsheim/Khosla	Germany/India	34,900
Yahoo	Jerry Yang	Taiwan	13,600
Google	Sergey Brin	Russia	20,222
eBay	Pierre Omidyar	France	16,200

Source: Office of Immigration Statistics, Department of Homeland Security; SEC filings of the indicated companies

Companies created by immigrant entrepreneurs create value.

Five examples of H-1B immigrant entrepreneurs and the value they created (as of 2008)

Company	Founder	Country of Origin	Market Cap
Intel	Andy Grove	Hungary	$86 billion
Sun	Bechtolsheim/Khosla	Germany/India	$6 billion
Yahoo	Jerry Yang	Taiwan	$18 billion
Google	Sergey Brin	Russia	$110 billion
eBay	Pierre Omidyar	France	$17 billion

Wages Paid to Immigrants vs. Wealth Created by Immigrants

Source: Office of Immigration Statistics, Department of Homeland Security; SEC filings of the indicated companies